

Timothy Shelley is the author of the five-volume MK-Ultra Series, which contains Stories When Little, Playboy's Progress, and WonderWomen, with Superman and Ragnarök, to follow, as his carefully structured and surprisingly humorous books treat world history, popular culture, and the story of his own amazing life—all as they relate to the brainwashing programs run by the deep state. He graduated with a bachelor's degree, cum laude, Phi Beta Kappa, from Pomona College, and he studied at Cambridge University, before going on to earn a master's and doctorate from the University of Virginia. After teaching courses like Heroism, Desire, and the Bible as a Visiting Assistant Professor at Haverford College, he changed careers, to attain a law degree, cum laude, from Washington and Lee University, while he lived on a cattle farm in the Blue Ridge. But no sooner did he begin his career as a corporate lawyer when he became embroiled in a custody battle for his newborn infant. So, for fourteen years, this single father and his amazing daughter, Lily Montgomery, travelled the country from Maine to Florida, Big Sur to the San Juans, the Big Island of Hawaii to the Alaskan Bush, and the New York Plaza to the Chicago and Seattle Four Seasons as well as the Willard and the St. Regis in our nation's capital, not to mention frequent visits to the Shenandoah Valley and Cape May—skiing, ice-skating, hiking, swimming, diving, riding horses and bicycles, paddling and sailing boats, flying in helicopters and bushplanes, ballooning, riding on trains, mushing dogsleds, stalking wild animals, and just having fun—as the author devoted himself to his only child, who has since continued on her own amazing adventures. Moving beyond parenthood, he became a publisher, journalist, and author—not to mention a political activist—as he returned to teaching college, while he is proud to have taught many fine men and women in courses treating law, geopolitics, civil rights, central banking, agribusiness, energy sources, communications, intellectual history, literature, and writing.
